Is there an indication of standardization between the Polish Munitions Industry and that of the USSR? If so, which weapons and/or equipment are concerned, and to what extent? (Examples Will Polish weapons fire Soviet ansunition, or vice-versa? Are Polish tanks, trucks, or other equipment patterned after those of the Coviets? Are parts interchangeable?)

As far as I know tanks and armored cars are all manufactured in the USSR and according to Soviet models. Light weapons are manufactured in Poland, especially in the plants of Starczewice and Skarzysko-Kamienna. I believe the weapons are of Soviet model; caliber and quality of ammunition is, therefore, the same in Poland and the USSR. It should always be remembered that the Soviets actually consider Foland as one of the Soviet Republics and that they are in the process of incorporating this country into their system and into their organization, in every respect.
